Was God Satisfied with His Creation or Not?

Eric Lyons

At evilbible.com, a Web site that purports to "spread the vicious truth about the Bible" ("Biblical...," 2013), the very first alleged "obvious contradiction" listed involves Genesis 1:31 and Genesis 6:6. Since Genesis 1:31 says, "God saw everything that He had made, and indeed it was very good," and Genesis 6:6 reveals that "the Lord was sorry that He had made man on the earth, and He was grieved in His heart," the Bible is said to be contradictory and untrustworthy. Allegedly, the Lord could not be both satisfied and dissatisfied with His Creation.

The fact is, however, God could logically be both pleased and displeased with His Creation, if the statements were referring to two different periods of time. Most any Bible student knows that, though only four complete chapters separate Genesis 1:31 and 6:6, they are separated—chronologically speaking—by more than a millennium. "In the beginning" God was pleased with His Creation. Several hundred years later, after "the Lord saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every intent of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually" (Genesis 6:5), God was then "sorry that He had made man on the earth, and He was grieved in His heart" (6:6). It is quite telling that such a simple explanation has apparently eluded the minds of many skeptics.
